A study of cAMP, cGMP and activity of cGMP phosphodiesterase was made in blood and peripheral tissues of rats in experimental burn shock. The levels of cAMP and cGMP in blood and myocardium in burn shock and after resuscitation were determined using HBI-60. Dynamics of the enzyme's activity was studied with the help of the spin label technique. The burn shock in rats was found to be accompanied by activation of the cAMP system in the body. The recovery of the organism from burn shock was found to be accompanied by recovery of the cAMP system which correlated with the restoration of the body. 5b5f913d15
