The precise mechanism of apoE secretion has not been fully determined. We have previously proposed that vesicles containing apoE are transported along the plasma membrane from the endoplasmic reticulum to the Golgi complex and transported to the plasma membrane by Rab2. In the present study, we demonstrate that Rab2 is involved in apoE secretion in HepG2 cells. The amount of secreted apoE is reduced by Rab2 depletion and is increased by Rab2 over-expression. We also demonstrate that the C-terminal tail of Rab2, which is necessary for the binding of a Rab2 effector domain, is important for the regulation of apoE secretion. This is the first report showing that Rab2 is a negative regulator of apoE secretion. In the two final days of the 2014 comic book season, both Marvel and DC have delivered their best performances at the top of their respective charts. Marvel opened the last month with #1, DC ended it with #1. It was a weekend with great Marvel and DC books, perfect for picking up your new Deadpool #1 or your first X-Men: Legacy #1, or for reviewing. The top five was filled with great entries, with new designs from long-time favorites, new issues from hits like Ms. Marvel and X-Men Legacy, and a few big numbers from landmark series. Visually, the Marvel women starred with Ms. Marvel #1, a beautiful new take on one of the best female characters in comics, while the rest of the top ten continued the momentum of an outstanding fall season for Marvel. DC continued to deliver big numbers, with five of the top 10 books posting their highest numbers to date. The closest numbers to the numbers Marvel posted were in stores November 9th, 10th, and 12th. o r o f 1 0 7 6 0 a n d 2 0 0 ? 4 0 W h 3e33713323
