AFFIRMED. 8 Arsenic-Sulfur Compound Emission Potential as a Predictor of Groundwater Quality along Selected Streams in Florida. Consistent and reliable methods for the management of hazardous sulfide-rich water in the environment are lacking. In this work, the chemicals released when pyrite, iron sulfide, and other associated mixtures of sulfide, arsenic, or sulfur-containing components react in water are examined in the laboratory. A range of criteria are used to evaluate the potential of these compounds to be released from soils and sediments to nearby surface waters. The criteria include the solubility of the arsenic-sulfur compound in water, the source (i.e., soil or sediment) from which arsenic-sulfur compounds are generated, and the concentration of the arsenic-sulfur compounds in the reacting water. d0c515b9f4
