Showtunes is a new show that tasks people with finding out what was going on in their house when it comes to the dead: human or animal. Their goal is to prove that the pets can still be so much fun even after they're dead. The 15-minute show is not only fun to watch but also has serious applications in real life. During the first episode, a contestant found out that his dead sister made a bet with him about his dog. One of the cats left more than 30 messages on the answering machine before it died. The contestant and the host of the show have to guess what was really going on. Even though most of us are tired of hearing the old saying "the cat is dead, long live the cat," the contestants have fun breaking the mold and they gave a new meaning to "dead cat bounce." In another episode, a contestant found a message from her cat about a sick loved one. She wasn't sure if it was a human or a pet. Her cat was quite sure that it was a human and it wanted to let her know how sad it was that her baby was suffering. Of course, the host and the contestant had to find out what was going on, what the message meant and whether it was a child or a pet.
